

Roman Bath and Hadrian's wall

Every town has its own bath complex. The Romans love washing and bathing and they built magnificent public bath houses in towns across their empire. You can see remains of a Roman bath in the city of Bath, in Somerset.

Hadrian's Wall

To control their territory in England, the Romans built a long wall to protect Roman England from the tribes who live in Scotland. Hadrian's Wall was built so well, that you can see parts of it today, nearly 2000 years after it was made. It was 117 kilometers long.

There were turrets at regular intervals from which soldiers can watch the land.

Who is Emperor Hadrian?

Hadrian is born in Rome in A.D. 76. He becomes Emperor of Rome. Hadrian comes to visit Britain in A.D. 122. His mission is to defend the northern Roman Empire. It is during this visit that he orders the construction of the wall called Hadrian's Wall.

ROMAN CITIES

Every town with the name ending in "CHESTER"

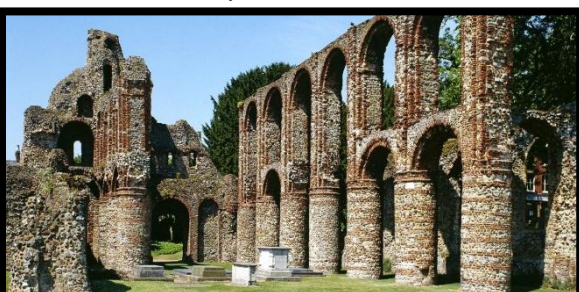

OR "CESTER" OR "CASTER" is a Roman town.

The word CHESTER comes from Castrum the Roman camp. The most famous Roman cities are:

The walled Roman city of Dorechester

Londinium,
Colchester,
St. Albans,
Dorechester.
